

Vision Statement

The American Crystallographic Association (ACA) is committed to serving students and young scientists through education, and embraces its role as a leader and collaborative partner to meet the educational and research aspirations of structural scientists in North America and around the world. Our dynamic environment shapes the association to realize our shared future. The ACA informs every dimension of its activities - cultivating learning, discovery of knowledge and encouraging shared leadership - to position the ACA as a model scientific interdisciplinary society.